ADAMS CLAIMS RADIO AND PLANES NOT SO EFFECTIVE

State Police Head Says They Must Undergo Many Changes

"DEAD" RADIO AREAS

Teletype Aids Him in Quickly
Dispatching Troopers
Throughout State

By John W. Scotzin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Aug. 31—(INS)—Radio and the airplane, often advanced as ideal weapons in combatting present day crime, must still undergo extensive perfection before they could be used to practical advantage by the Pennsylvania State Police, in the opinion of Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent.

"I find at the present time that planes are of no practical use to us," Major Adams declared, "because you can't do anything from the air. Another factor to be considered is that you always can't land when and where you want to."

Criminals being pursued by police many times head for mountainous country where a hurried landing by an airplane carrying police forces would be physically impossible, he explained. Added to this apparent drawback is the prohibitive cost which would be required to purchase and maintain a fleet of ships, he said.

Major Adams believes, however, that several auto-gyro planes supplementing the regular crime fighting forces could be used advantageously. One of the advantages of this type of airship is that it can make vertical landings, he pointed out.

As for the radio, Major Adams said: "I favor the radio as a means of fighting crime but it also has its limitations. There is no guarantee that all messages will be received."

"Dead spots" prevailing in certain areas constitute one of the greatest drawbacks in the use of radio in police work, he pointed out. The cruising car entering one of these receives no messages and thus loses its contact with headquarters.

He expressed satisfaction with the present teletype system connecting the police units. Pointing out that he has troopers stationed throughout the state, Major Adams said he can shift them to strategic points at a moment's notice by flashing his orders over these automatic typewriters.

Major Adams' favorite crime-fighting theory deals with the creation of a centrally controlled police system for Pennsylvania, a suggestion he has often advanced.

Under his plan, a police commission would be established with all police units in the state organized into a centrally controlled unit. As a result, police would be removed from political influence and law enforcement agencies would be co-ordinated, he said. Major Adams added:

"There have been many instances where local authorities failed to show the right co-operative spirit in the apprehension of criminals and thus hampered the work of larger units."

CONVICTS UNDER CONTROL

Guards at both riot-torn institutions reported immediate renewal of any uprising by the prisoners negligible. The greater portion of the convicts in both prisons, however, was still kept in cells as a disciplinary measure.

RECOVERY REACHES PEAK IN BRITAIN

Two Million Unemployed In A Few Large Areas

SURVEY IS COMPLETED

By Laurence Meier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Aug. 31—(INS)—A world gaping enviously at British "recovery" has been misled by an improvement that is far from complete geographically, industrially, or socially—and may already have reached its peak!

This gloomy conclusion was first recorded today as the product of a survey made by the Westminster Bank, one of Britain's "big five."

"The existence of two million unemployed, largely concentrated in a few big areas, forbids a feeling of complacency in the present situation," says the bank's report.

Southern and central England have taken the lion's share of the improvement, while very little recovery is noticeable in northern England, Scotland and Wales.

This is because the great exporting industries, such as coal-mining in Wales, ship-building in Scotland and northern England and Ireland, and textile manufacture in Lancashire, are still in the depths of the depression.

What improvement there has been, has occurred in industries which, aided by a tariff policy, cater to home consumption.

THE WASHINGTON PARADE

Politician Who Talks Most
Does Not Always Get
The Votes

HOPKINS CHANGES MIND

Many Now Have Different
Opinion of Upton
Sinclair

By Karl M. Kahn
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1934 by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—(INS)—The old adage that the wheel that squeaks the loudest gets the grease doesn't imply that the politician who talks the most gets the votes.

In a torrent of votes that drowned three Democratic congressmen in the Oklahoma primary, Representative Wilbur Cartwright came swimming through to re-nomination.

"I didn't make a speech," he explained when he came up to the capital. "I thought that if my opponents started to blame me for the drought and all the other troubles we had in Oklahoma and I got into an argument with them it wouldn't do me any good. I decided it was better not to say anything—and it was."

Secretary Ickes got off the train that brought him back from Titusville, Penn., red-eyed and weary after a sleepless night.

By mid-afternoon he had to snatch forty winks.

"Isn't that the railroad to which you lent $77,000,000 for improvements?" asked an associate as the PWA administrator dropped onto the couch.

"That's the one," Ickes replied, "and believe me I thought about it all night long while it rattled and shook and I tossed."

Nomination for title of "meanest politician":

The South Carolina Democrat who used this argument in his primary campaign for a Congressman's seat:

"Why elect him? He is in bad health, the chances are he will die during his term, and then you'll only have to go to the trouble and expense of electing another man anyway."

Again the politician who talked the most didn't get the votes. The Congressman was renominated.

"You can't build houses at 9.72 percent interest rates," said Hopkins, referring to the figure to which interest comes under the Housing Administration's plan or repaying the money in installments.

Housing Administrator James A. Moffett saw Hopkins' remark in the newspapers. The next day he invited the relief administrator to lunch.

"I think," Hopkins thought aloud to newspaper men after Moffett had talked to him, "the present rates of interest under the Housing Administration's plan are necessary in a home modernization campaign. The rate is only about one-half the old rates."

Ho, hum.

It is amazing the number of Democrats in this town to whom Upton Sinclair was an obnoxious socialist a few weeks ago, but to whom the Socialist nominee of California Democrats for the governorship now is an outstanding member of their party.

Secretary of Commerce Roper thinks there will not be a textile workers' strike "because of the good sense of the American people."

Maybe the Secretary of Commerce is the only official in Washington who thinks the American people have good sense; every other official thinks there will be a textile strike.

INJURED MAN CONFESSES RIEGELSVILLE MURDER

His Son Will Also Face
Murder Charge, It Is Believed

SON PROCURED THE GUN

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 31—Bucks County authorities have reached what they believe to be a solution of the fatal shooting of James Donegan, Jr., 33, Philadelphia, in a roadside restaurant near Riegelsville, late Sunday night.

Mame ("George") Koury, 35, Easton, proprietor of the restaurant, is said to have confessed the shooting yesterday to the police and Bucks County Detective Russo.

Koury is still in an Easton hospital suffering from injuries he received in the free-for-all fight staged in his place of business by a crowd of picnickers, who wanted to buy beer.

Koury's son, Habo Koury, 17, is also to be charged along with his father, with murder. It is said that Habo procured the gun for his father.

Habo, it is reported, went to the bathroom of the restaurant and there obtained the gun for his father, when the fracas reached its peak.

Koury has obtained the services of an Easton attorney to defend him, and it was in the presence of the attorney that his confession was made yesterday.

Habo Koury will be given a hearing today on the murder charge.

Devise Plan To Aid Home Owners To Improve Homes

The Plumbing and Heating Finance Company, which was the first institution in the country to make an insured loan to a homeowner under the new Housing Act, has completed its program for local home owners' loans. Over one hundred applications already in from south Jersey and Philadelphia home owners will be acted on this week. Meetings will be held in Philadelphia and probably at Norristown and Lansdale.

The company has modified its policies in order to co-operate with the Better Housing Program. Although the institution is a subsidiary of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Company, which operates the Pacific Steel Boiler plant here, loans will be granted for improvements with other than heating and sanitary work involved. A certain percentage of plumbing and heating, however, must be included in the job.

Where loans have already been made by other institutions operating under the act, the Plumbing and Heating Finance Company will make an additional loan for plumbing or heating. As many as five properties of any kind will be financed for one owner, the total of each loan not to exceed $2,000. Loans may run from one to three years, with no down payments. The minimum monthly payment is 10 dollars, and the loans carry a 5% discount fee as the total charge.

Prominent men in the heating and plumbing industry regard the new plan as the greatest step taken by the industry in its business history. Twelve meetings are scheduled for metropolitan area at which representatives of the institution have been invited to speak. Besides the Lansdowne and Philadelphia meetings others are scheduled at Wilmington, Camden and Atlantic City and meetings have already been held at Chester and Trenton.

PLEDGE $225 TOWARD FALLS FIRE PROTECTION

Mayor Stockham Obtains
Donations From Property
Owners in District

WILL MEET DEMANDS

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 31—Mayor Thomas B. Stockham, in an effort to conciliate the disagreement between Morrisville Common Council and the Falls Township Supervisors on the question of fire protection, has secured promises of $225 from property holders in the township towards the $500 demanded by the Morrisville municipal authorities for the service for the remainder of 1934.

The Falls Supervisors have already offered Morrisville Borough $300 of the total amount, and the amount collected by the Mayor is looked upon as a definite step towards conciliation.

At the outset of the controversy, the local borough fathers asked Falls Township to contribute $1,000 for the protection for the year, but when this was refused offered to compromise on $500 for the remainder of this year.

This offer, too, however, was rejected. The property holders of the township, anxious to secure fire protection from the local fire department, were King Farms Company and the Warner Company, who donated $100 apiece, and Starkey Farms Company, who gave $25 towards the fund.

The Starkey Company explained its small contribution on the fact that it has been the custom of that firm to contribute after every fire on the Starkey property.

The Fire Protection Committee of Common Council, which includes Councilmen John G. Bleasdale, chairman, Elwood Kohl and Russell Pfleger, is expected to meet at the call of the Mayor in the next few days to make a decision. It is understood that the Falls offer of $300 still stands.

It has been contended by some Councilmen that the local governing body was reluctant to deny the township fire protection, but that the maintenance of the fire companies has cost over $5,000 since 1927, and that Falls has contributed but $300 since that time, and that with fifty per cent of the calls in the township, it was unfair to the taxpayers of the borough to pay out such a large sum of money.

Another viewpoint is that unless the money from Falls is forthcoming, and the service is continued, it will be necessary to raise the fire tax rate for next year, an action which the Council is opposed to.

The fire companies of the borough have backed up Council's action in the controversy, although it has been said that many of the firemen did not favor denying the neighboring communities protection.

ROOSEVELT KIDNAP PLOT

New York, Aug. 31—Although gradually accumulated evidence indicated the plot to kidnap the grandchildren of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was borne in a distorted mind, police and Federal authorities today worked carefully to determine whether an organized underworld mob might not have been secretly involved.

Meanwhile Benjamin Franklin Varn, 33, of Charleston, S. C., ex-navy man, was being held incommunicado while scores of detectives and department of justice agents checked his belongings, and all angles of his past career. The attempt to locate gangsters who might have employed Varn as a "front" for a daring and diabolical plot was disclosed by high police officials, following a statement by Varn's brother, John, in Charleston, in which he declared the prisoner might have been influenced by other ex-service men with violation of the Lindbergh Law, and with attempt to extort $168,000 from the President's family under threat of kidnapping or harming the chief executive's three grandchildren, "Buzzie" and "Sistie" Dall, and Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, three-months-old daughter of Elliot Roosevelt, the president's second son and his second wife, the former Ruth Googins, was to be arraigned before a Federal Commission sometime before noon today.

Varn was arrested last night in the William Sloane House of the Young Men's Christian Association, following a ten-day investigation which began with receipt of threatening letters by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the President's wife.

RELIEF CONFERENCE TODAY

Harrisburg, Aug. 31—Pennsylvania's critical relief situation still remained shrouded in uncertainty today. Although Geo. H. Earl, Democratic candidate for governor, reiterated his refusal to attend the bi-partisan conference seeking a solution to the crisis without calling a special session of the legislature, was scheduled to meet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, at noon today. As the hour for the conference arrived the Commonwealth approached the new month with its relief coffers empty, and no funds allocated from the Federal government or other sources to care for those on relief rolls during the coming Fall and Winter months.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, was to meet at the conference with Governor Pinchot, attorney general William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for governor; M. Harvey Taylor, Republican state chairman; and Eric H. Bidle, state emergency relief director.

What binding action the conference can take was considered problematic in view of the absence of Earle and David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman.

Earle in a telegram from Wilkes-Barre last night rejected the Governor's plea that he reconsider his action, and attend the meeting. The Democratic candidate again requested the executive to call an immediate special session to deal with relief.

Governor Clifford Pinchot left for New York by plane at eight o'clock this morning.

LANGHORNE BOARD BANS MARRIED TEACHERS

Only One Remains On Staff
Until End of 1934-35
Term

STICKS TO ITS RULE

LANGHORNE, Aug. 31—"We feel that if a woman teacher gets married, she has someone to keep her," remarked Joseph C. Davenport, president of the Langhorne-Middletown board of school directors, in speaking today of the board's adherence to its ruling not to contract with any more married women as teachers in the public schools here.

By following this ruling during the past few years the board found that during the past term there were only two women teachers on the faculty who were married. One of the two left the Langhorne-Middletown schools at the end of the past term, accepting a contract nearby, with the result that only one remained. To the latter notice has been served by the directors that her contract will not be renewed after the 1934-35 term. Thus at the close of the coming term the local board will have accomplished its purpose, and will have aided in employment of single women, who for the past several years have been jobless.

"There is a scarcity of positions for teachers, and many married women with husbands to support them have been holding such posts," continued Mr. Davenport. "Our board is following the procedure which is being widely practiced throughout the state, thus aiding the jobless."

SAROBIA PLAYERS TO END SEASON TONIGHT

Will Present 3-Act Comedy
At Manor Theatre
in Croydon

"HER HUSBAND'S WIFE"

The Sarobia Players will complete their 1934 summer season this evening with their presentation of "Her Husband's Wife" at the Manor Theatre, Croydon, at 8.30 p. m. The play, a three act comedy-farce by A. E. Thomas, the author of "No More Ladies," deals with a rather unusual situation—that of an ailing wife picking out her successor in order to insure her husband's comfort and the continuance of his admiration for her, even after her death. To do this, she makes an engagement between her husband (in his absence) and the most dependable—and most dowdy woman she knows. Unfortunately, even the course of simulated love does not always run smooth, and the hypochondriacal wife finds more things in life to worry over than taking her red or green medicine.

The uniqueness of the situation, combined with the very witty dialogue, makes "Her Husband's Wife" a very popular play. It ran for nearly a year in New York, and was played by stock companies and leading amateur groups, like the Comedy Club of New York, all over the country. The Sarobia Players consider that it will make a fitting climax for their season and expect it to rank among their outstanding productions. The production will, as usual, be under the direction of Mr. Paul E. Randall.

The part of the present wife in "Her Husband's Wife" will be taken by Miriam Davis with Mary Myers representing the future Mrs. Stuart Randolph. Norman Strickland will portray the devoted but befuddled husband, and Morton Tecosky will appear as Richard Belden, his brother-in-law, and the conflicting force in the piece. Balm is spread on the excited household by Uncle John, played by Walter H. Grindrod, a bachelor. Nora, the maid, will be played by Shirley Copeland.

The set will be quite different from anything as yet executed by the production staff. It will strike a modernistic note in keeping with the modern and merry note of the play. Cyril Saylor is scene-designer and Frederick P. McCarthy will design and execute the lighting effects.

This will be the seventh play to be presented by the Players in the course of the last ten weeks. Special programs have been featured on the three Friday evenings when plays were not given. Outstanding productions of the year have been those of "Sun-Up," the drama of the Southern mountaineers; "Hawk Island," a mystery play; and "Dover Road," and "Her Husband's Servants," the two most recent productions. Other plays have been Booth Tarkington's "Tweddles," and Aurania Rouverol's "Skidding."

During the course of the season, there have been approximately thirty students registered at Sarobia, and most of them have been in residence there for the whole ten weeks' period. Plans for the 1935 season are now being formulated.

Reports Being Robbed of $200 On Bristol Pike

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 31—His face cut and his forehead bearing a large welt, Walter Augustine, former Trentonian, reported to Morrisville State Police Wednesday night that he was clubbed and robbed of $200 by two men whom he met in a Philadelphia saloon.

Augustine, who said he formerly lived at 19 Alden avenue, Trenton, now resides on Spring Garden street, Philadelphia. He told troopers that he visited a beer saloon on Spring Garden street. After several drinks two strangers at the bar invited him to accompany them on an automobile ride to Trenton, he said.

On the Bristol Pike, near Tullytown, one of the men clubbed him over the head with a blackjack or other blunt implement and, after taking $200 from his clothing, the men tossed him to the road, Augustine said. He declared that he lay unconscious for some time. Upon regaining his faculties, he said, he walked to a house nearby, Owen Titus, occupant of the dwelling, took him in and notified the Morrisville State Police. Trooper Thomas Brace conducted an investigation.

Augustine said the two men were riding in a blue coach auto. No trace of them has been found.

THE "CIRCUS" IS IN TOWN

(By "The Stroller")
"Eight white mice—see how they run!"

The familiar ditty might well be thus changed after a glimpse is gained at the "Mickey Mouse Circus" in the display window of C. W. Winter, Mill and Wood streets.

The "circus" interests the tots and throws them into gales of laughter. The "circus" also interests the adults.

The little performers do their stunts on two turn-tables, a revolving cage, and on wire runways and ladders. And when they once mount the turntables and their hurried patter-patter starts the circular platform moving, it isn't the easiest thing for the "circus folks" to get off.

The playfulness continues for a long time, and when finally the mice are tired they curl up and also pile up in the corner, and go to sleep.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD

Parents the world over will hope that Dr. John A. Kolmer of Philadelphia has actually developed a vaccine to immunize children against that most dreaded of childhood diseases, infantile paralysis.

The progress of science in immunization throughout the long years of work and hardship, and devastating illness, is among the major chapters in medical history. It is, too, interesting to read the following thumbnail description of the several theories of immunization:

One is to inject bodies of dead germs, as is done in the inoculations used against typhoid fever. Something in these germs evidently is mistaken by the body's immunity factories for a living germ invasion. A supply of the immunizing chemicals is produced and set free into the blood, ready to repel any real attack of typhoid fever germs which later may materialize. Another expedient is to inject living germs of a variety relatively harmless but similar to the germs against which protection is desired, as is done in vaccination against smallpox. Still a third procedure is to inject some chemical extracted from the germs, as in the toxoid treatment against diphtheria.

Dr. Kolmer's procedure against infantile paralysis belongs to still a fourth group of expedients, those in which living germs first are encased by some process which makes them harmless, then injected to fool the body's immunity factories into making the chemical to fight that particular germ. Infantile paralysis is caused by the kind of organism called a virus, probably a living germ too small for even the best microscopes to detect. Some of these invisible germs are treated, outside the body, with a violent poison extracted from the castor bean plant. Just enough of this poison is used to weaken the invisible virus, but not quite kill it. These weakened germs Dr. Kolmer finds unable to cause actual disease, but still strong enough to provide the stimulus to immunity. Later accidental invasions by similar virus which has not been encased then are likely to be repelled.

Present information seems to prove the new treatment harmless. Whether or not it is effective can be proved only by experience and time.

GOVERNMENT IS PROSPEROUS

Washington reports that the national income fell off from $3 billion dollars in 1929 to under 40 billions in 1932. The only division of activity that did not show a decline in income was government, which increased its "income" 5 percent. Unfortunately, this income was not earned. It was collected from the taxpayers or borrowed. So it came out of the pockets of the people.

As has been remarked on numerous other occasions, this situation indicates that one way to increase the incomes of the people generally would be to find ways to reduce the share that government—city, county, state and national—takes from them.

You can't fool all of the creditors all of the time.

Well, why shouldn't the pretend they are poor? The pretend they were rich.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXI

"But if some one discovered something that was . . . well, really marvelous—something that never disappointed anyone and always made a woman more beautiful, wouldn't it hold on as it started?"

"There's never been anything like that. And thousands of people are working on beauty formulas all the time. You're talking about a common dream, Caroline." She had asked him to call her by her first name. Malcolm loved to say it, thought it was the most beautiful name in the world.

"I suppose so," she sighed, "but why shouldn't you or I be a great discoverer?"

"We might, if we were inspired." Or had the proper incentive, Caroline appended.

"I'm afraid it's out of my line," Malcolm said sadly.

Caroline laughed, but there was a new note underlying the sound. "When I've got it," she said, "you can put it over."

"Fine," he exclaimed, "and now that we're on the road to riches let's get back to work." Caroline found the afternoon's work less monotonous than during the morning. Her mind was scarcely at all on the things her hands were doing. There was Howard to think about. She tried not to think of him, tried resolutely to put him out of her mind and concentrate on the exciting idea that had come to her, an idea born of her determination not to stay where Fate, with the help of the Dunsworths, had placed her. The contrast of Howard's position with her own as she had stood watching her employer's son drive up in swaggering style to an entrance that she was no longer permitted to use had dulled her sense of sociological superiority and left her with a very human feeling of resentment.

It was truly incentive enough to arouse every atom of Rutledge stubbornness in her character. People were either laughing at her or pitying her, she supposed. She had been above caring much about that, but Howard's nonchalant attitude made it all a very bitterly real thought to her now. If Howard had stood by—nothing else would have mattered half so much. His complete indifference was too much. And how much sweeter it would be to have the last laugh if she earned it herself!

From that day on she applied herself with the drive of a consuming desire to reach the goal she had set for herself. At work in the factory she could do nothing but think, but her thoughts obsessed her; new ideas, new possibilities came to her then. At night, in the class room laboratory and at home, she worked them out in texts and experiments.

Her mother complained that she was wasting herself, taxing her endurance to excess, but Caroline never stopped long enough to find out if she was tired.

She, in turn, urged her mother to think of herself, to find some interest in life. She suggested pupils for music. It was Philip who vetoed this, giving as a reason his wife's delicate health. The truth was that he had no money to buy, or even to rent, a piano.

Caroline made other suggestions, but for one reason or another all were rejected. She was sorry she had decorated the house so entirely before taking up her studies at the U. Had she left the house in its original state, she told herself, her mother might have been driven to undertake the work herself, with Philip wielding the paint brush.

It had been a mistake, she decided, to assume all the burden of beautifying their home. It had paralyzed her parents' initiative in the matter. Perhaps it was also a mistake to continue her general supervision of the household. Planning the week's menus and going to market on Saturday afternoons, doing the hundred and one things on Sunday that Mrs. Wade had not attended to.

cover that it was a fowl intended for boiling, which roasting made too tough for eating. But the following Saturday, after having eaten chicken hash most of the week, Caroline was still firm. She went along, however, and instructed Alva in the difference between broilers, fryers, roasting chickens and those to be used for fricassee. Alva had always known there was a difference but she never inquired into it until the dish was set before her on the table. That had been one of the reasons why her cooks never left her except when compelled by circumstances beyond their control.

Caroline's resolution was shaken a trifle when they came to the vegetables. "Can't we just order them from a clerk?" her mother appealed as Caroline handed her a bunch of carrots.

did not want to have her mother see in her eyes. But it seemed to Alva that it was time to speak of it. "I think you know," she said slowly, "that we can count on your father for very little. He's drinking—too much."

"Yes," Caroline said miserably, "I know. But he was very generous and kind to us for a long time. We mustn't forget that. Perhaps it's right that our turn has come to do things for him."

"It may be," Alva admitted, "but it was easy for him. We're helpless." "No, we're not," Caroline contradicted her. "If you will relieve me of looking after things here in the house I can get in a lot of good work on my formulas during the week ends."

Alva tried, but she wasn't very successful. Her heart wasn't in it.

"But if some one discovered something that always made a woman more beautiful, wouldn't it hold on as it started?"

"We'll save time by picking them out ourselves," Caroline told her, "and we'll have a better choice. This isn't a first-class store, you know, mother, but things are cheaper here."

"Is it necessary to economize in such a small way?"

"I'm afraid it is, and you'd better remove your gloves. You should wear washable ones to market."

The sight of her mother's lovely hands, ungloved and filled with none too fresh vegetables, was a shock to Caroline. For a moment she rebelled against the violation of beauty symbolized by those exquisite, tapering fingers among the beets and carrots.

Her own hands—she glanced at them—more or less sacrificed to labor! The hands of the workers at the factory! Must all loveliness be destroyed? Wasn't there a need for delicate, useless things?

The moment of wavering passed. They were not living in a world of beauty; that was gone. Utility was more important to them now. Deliberately in defiance of weakness, she piled a bunch of onions on the beets and carrots.

That night, she did not attend classes on Saturday, she told her mother for the first time of her future hopes. "And so I cannot give my time to housework," she added quietly. "You must take over the reins, mother. It will be hard for you at first I know, but you will find a satisfaction in it. I'm sure. Father ought to be able to help you in many ways."

As Caroline said this she looked away from Alva's unhappy countenance, but there was a thought in the mind of both that neither had mentioned to the other since coming to South Town. A thought Caroline

Yesterday and Today

WHO would want to go back to the standards of even a generation ago? We have traveled far since then. Inventions and scientific discoveries have furnished the principal vehicles: New conveniences, improved merchandise, better foods, added health-conserving means.

But the thing which has hastened us on to the knowledge and acceptance of their benefits is advertising. It has brought new things quickly to all of us and sped us toward a different, better mode of living.

Modern advertising sells us, not only things, but ideas. The advertising of soaps has sold us the health advantages of more frequent bathing. The advertising of modern bathroom equipment has made bathing a singular pleasure.

The advertising of improved razors and beard softeners has made whisking off whiskers a simple daily ditty instead of a weekly major operation.

Tooth-paste, tooth-brush and mouth-wash manufacturers and retailers are saving us untold aches and years of marred smiles, by advertising the importance of oral hygiene.

As a result of the advertising of food manufacturers and purveyors, we have escaped from the drowsy dulness caused by heavy breakfasts and are full of forenoon vim and clear-headedness.

The clothes we wear, furniture we use, fuel we burn, car we drive, telephone we've installed — all these would not so quickly have come home to us, were it not for the silent but irresistible force of advertising.

Keep pace with the world you live in by reading the advertisements in this newspaper.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

FOOD shoppers this week-end will find pork prices high, beef the same, and lamb lower. The drought, affecting milk supplies, is raising the prices of butter and cheese. Unaffected by the drought in North America, bananas are a leading value this week. Try them fried, broiled, or in ice cream. Ample supplies of home-grown fruits put grapes, cantaloupes and prunes on the low-priced list. As for vegetables — tomatoes, coming from nearby truck gardens, are top-notch and cheap, and good values will be found in celery and Boston lettuce.

From the above information on what is cheap and good, our experts recommend the following menus as giving the most for your money:

Low Cost Dinner

Cold Beef Loaf
Scalloped Potatoes
Tomato and Cucumber Salad
Bread and Butter
Sliced Bananas with Custard
Tea or Coffee

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Shoulder of Lamb
Browned Potatoes Buttered Squash
Pickled Beet Salad
Bread and Butter
Peach Bavarian
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced)

Very Special Dinner

Chilled Melon
Southern Fried Chicken, Cream Gravy
Corn-on-the-Cob
Mashed Sweet Potatoes
Lettuce Salad
Hot Rolls and Butter, Peach Preserves
Banana Ice Cream
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced)

DAVIS HOPS OFF

Los Angeles, Aug. 31—Douglass Davis, of Atlanta, Ga., hopped off at 3.20 a. m. today in the annual renewal of the Bendix Trophy cross-country air-speed dash to Cleveland, O. Five minutes later a second flier took to the air, and was closely followed by others in the dash.

COMPLETE STRIKE DETAILS

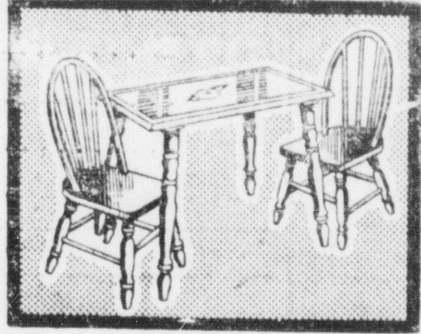

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31—Union textile leaders today were completing last minute details for the zero hour in the strike call which will take 600,000 textile workers from cotton mills, Saturday at 11.30 p. m., while operators continued their adamant refusal to deal with the workers.

The National Labor Board, and the Department of Labor continued efforts to avoid a strike, but little hope for avoiding a nation-wide tie-up in the industry is envisioned—without action by President Roosevelt.

While union leaders continued preparations for the strike, 400,000 other workers in silk, wool and rayon were awaiting opportunity of joining their fellow-workers in the cotton industry, with the chief executive apparently holding himself aloof from the entire situation. Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relief Board, continued his forlorn battle, but without the slightest hope for avoiding the strike which has been brewing since June.

Geographical disparity in recovery is shown in the following table supplied by the Ministry of Labor for the country's eight main territorial divisions. The figures give the percentage of jobless—those who are on the "dole"—in relation to the total number who participate in the government's unemployment scheme. Practically all industrial workers are insured:

| | 1931 | 1932 | 1933 | 1934 |
|---------------|------|------|------|------|
| London | 12.2 | 13.5 | 11.8 | 8.8 |
| South-Eastern | 12.9 | 14.3 | 11.5 | 7.9 |
| South-Western | 14.5 | 17.1 | 15.7 | 12.6 |
| Midlands | 20.3 | 20.1 | 17.4 | 12.2 |
| North-Eastern | 27.4 | 28.5 | 26.0 | 21.8 |
| North-Western | 28.2 | 25.8 | 23.5 | 20.0 |
| Scotland | 26.6 | 27.7 | 26.1 | 22.9 |
| Wales | 32.4 | 36.5 | 34.6 | 31.5 |
| Great Britain | 21.4 | 22.0 | 19.8 | 16.8 |

Thus Wales, which has long suffered most from unemployment, has also shown the least improvement.

Individual towns in Britain's "black spots" show appalling unemployment figures—like Brynmawr, in Brecknockshire, with an index of 74.5% of Rhaina, Monmouthshire, 69.7%.

Glasgow is the worst off of the great cities, with an unemployment percentage of 27.5—well over 100,000 jobless! Liverpool has 27.6%, London only 9.3%, and Birmingham, great motor-manufacturing center, has but 7%.

"The 'black spots' are not only very black, but they refuse to get any lighter," observes the Westminster Bank, "and the persistence of their intense unemployment must hinder the recovery of the nation as a whole."

During the last year, unemployment actually increased in six Welsh and thirteen Scottish counties.

Industrially, shipbuilding is the worst off, with 47.6 men who follow that trade now workless. The percentage of coal miners out of work is 28.6; cotton operatives, 21; woolen operatives, 15.8.

Showing the changing industrial trend, the bank's review says:

"In June, 1933, coal mining, general engineering, shipbuilding and railway services, iron and steel, railway engineering, cotton and wool textiles, together gave employment to 29.8% of all insured persons; in June, 1932, the same industries employed only 18.7%. But another group, comprising the distributive trades, miscellaneous services, building and public works, contracting, electrical trades, printing and publishing, and miscellaneous metal trades, etc., which between them gave employment to 32.1% of the total in 1933, employed 44.5% ten years later."

Another factor in the geographical isolation of southern England's recovery is the tendency of new industries—most of which produce for the home market—to settle in the south, nearer to the biggest market, and away from the high taxes in the stricken areas.

"It is being questioned," says the Westminster Bank's report, however, "whether the recovery movement has not attained its zenith, whether the limit of expansion of the home market has not been reached. Whatever the answer to the second question, it seems inevitable that the time will come when that point will have been reached, and unless a substantial enlargement and broadening of export trade has been achieved meanwhile, some reaction must be expected, with an adverse effect upon employment figures. For this country, it is only through increased trade that the obstinate problem of unemployment will be solved."

Denmark Drops Peace Plans to Save Province

Denmark has decided it takes more than one peace-loving nation to play at disarmament. Ever since the Social Democrats came into power under Prime Minister Stauning, the tiny island kingdom of Christian X has pared its military budgets down to the last kroner, partly because it realizes it is futile to spend enormous sums for defense with the nation so open to invasion at any time. But with the advent of the German Nazis to power, Denmark has been forced to turn back on its disarming activities due to the current propaganda to reunite Schleswig province with Germany, which had been returned to Denmark through a plebiscite after the World war, almost 75 years after Prussia tore it from the Danish kingdom. Premier Stauning has moved armed police and soldiers to the unrestful frontier to show the world that Denmark means business.

PREPARATIONS WHICH ARE CAREFULLY MADE ARE AID IN PICKLING

By Miss Rhandena Armstrong

(Home Economics Representative)

Does pickling refer to just cucumber pickles? No, fruit pickles, too, whole pickled peaches, crabapples, or pears cooked in a spicy sweet-sour syrup; and relishes, such as tomato catsup and chili sauce, are included.

Whatever the variety, the purpose of pickling is to get tart spicy flavor through the vegetables or fruit, to keep or develop attractive color, and to give crispness, especially to vegetable pickles.

In pickling as for canning, use fresh fruits, and vegetables in prime condition. If pickling whole cucumbers, peaches or other fruits, have them uniform in size so the pickling liquid penetrates and seasons them evenly.

Overcooking pickled fruits like preserves impairs the texture and the flavor. To keep the fruits from shriveling and breaking up, let them stand overnight after the first cooking in the sweet-sour syrup, then drain the syrup from the fruit, boil it down separately and pour again over the fruit, repeating as often as necessary. In this way the sugar has a chance to draw out the fruit juices while the fruit slowly absorbs the spicy syrup without shriveling.

For cucumber pickles leave on one-eighth to one-fourth inch of the stem. Wash them before brining and put into the brine as soon after gathering as possible to prevent hollow cucumbers.

Soft pickles are the result of a brine too weak to stop the growth of bacteria causing spoilage. A 10 per cent solution—a brine in which a fresh egg will float—one and two-thirds cups of salt to one gallon of water—is a necessary preventive.

If a very sweet or a very sour pickle is desired the pickles should first be placed in a weak solution for a few days, after which the strength of the solution may be increased.

Too much salt or sugar or too strong vinegar will cause pickles to shrivel and become tough.

Pickles usually keep better if sealed airtight for storage.

Add a snappy tang to your meals by serving a tart, spicy flavored vegetable or fruit.

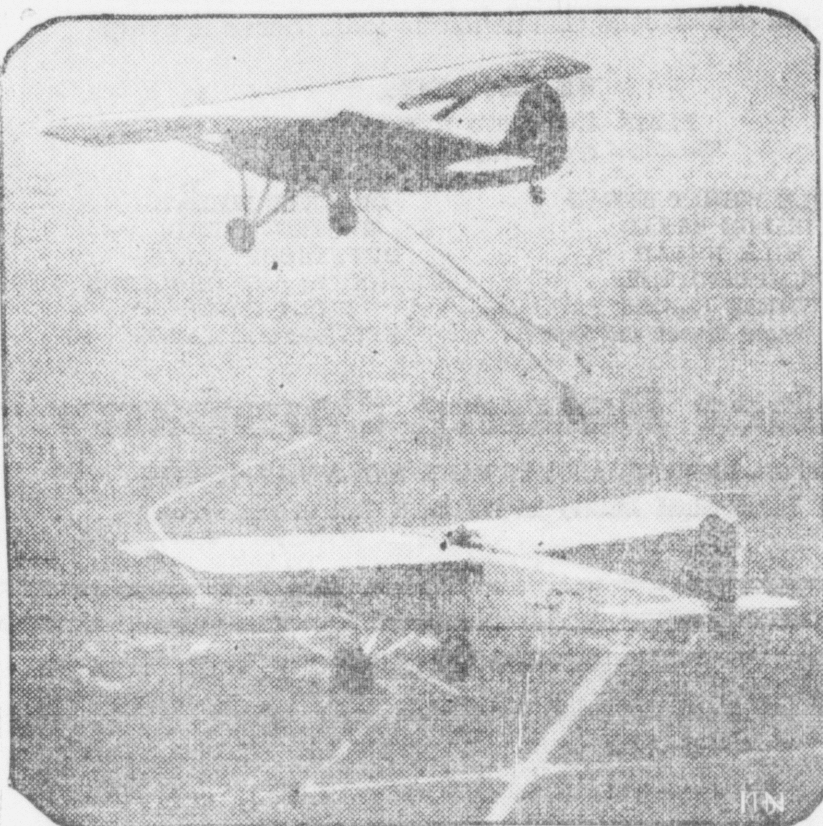

KILLED BY PERCOLATOR

HELSINGFORS—(INS)—One of the nurses of the Harna Sanatorium for consumptives has died in the attempt to make herself some coffee. She prepared the coffee in a percolator, sat down—and fell asleep. The coffee boiled, melted first the tin lining and then the copper of the percolator.

The poisonous fumes thus produced caused the sleeping nurse to lose consciousness, and all efforts to revive her proved in vain.

FIRCE OR KOHLER WILL PITCH AT HULMEVILLE

Either "Pete" Firce or "Joe" Kohler will tee the mound for the Bristol A. A. team tomorrow afternoon at Hulmeville as the third game of the play-off series is played. The teams, Bristol and Hulmeville, split in the first two games played the last week-end. On Sunday, the fourth game of the series will be played at Bristol.

Opposed to the picked Bristol moundman will be "Ike" Watson. Watson is the only Hulmeville thrower who hasn't seen action during the series. Last week-end Manager Black pitched "Pete" Devlin and "Lefty" Vanzant and later did some relief work himself, but Watson was an out-fielder. In the event that Bristol wins on the morrow it is evident that Black himself will be tossing them up on Leedom's field, Sunday.

Both clubs will be after the victories over the week-end as a double win means that the playoff is over and the winner crowned the Lower Bucks County League champions.

Hulmeville lost a valuable player in the contest last Saturday when "Vic" Rockhill injured his knee sliding back to second base on a close play in the eighth inning. Rockhill will be lost to Hulmeville for the remainder of the season. Harrison filled in at Rockhill's place at shortstop, with Still going to second base. The only Bristol player who received an injury was "Walt" Forrest, but he is back into harness and ready to start the contest.

The A. A. pitchers are having quite a bit of difficulty in trying to stop the bat of "Dutch" Afflerbach, Hulmeville's receiver. The Dutchman has crashed out a duo of doubles and two singles. He has been very potent in carrying and hitting runs across the platter.

Manager Mulholland has instructed his hurlers to bear down on the fiery Hulmeville catcher and stop him dead in his tracks with his heavy hitting. The remainder of the team's lineups will remain the same.

The games will begin at three o'clock, sharp.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE

All candidates for the St. Ann's A. A. football team are requested to report on St. Ann's field Sunday morning at ten o'clock.

"Charlie" Whyne who was on the bill against the colored team will return tonight to be opposed to Roy Devlin, speed-ball thrower of the All-Stars. John Dougherty will handle the slants of Devlin with Angelo doing the receiving for the Clowns.

STATE NEWS

BELLEFONTE — (INS) — The

Sheriff's hammer has threatened to block the time-honored educational trail blazed by Bellefonte Academy over a period of 129 years.

The institution, organized in 1805, has been posted for Sheriff's sale to satisfy a mortgage of over $55,000 held against the property by the Fidelity Trust Company, of Pittsburgh.

Widely known recently for its athletic prowess, the Academy became hard-pressed financially several years ago when two fires badly damaged the main building. It was almost entirely rebuilt with funds secured by mortgaging the property. Since then there has been a marked decrease in student attendance.

WILLIAMSPORT — (INS) — Just before leaving for military training camp several weeks ago, Lieut. William A. Laedlein was reprimanded by his superior officer here for skipping rifle practice on the local range.

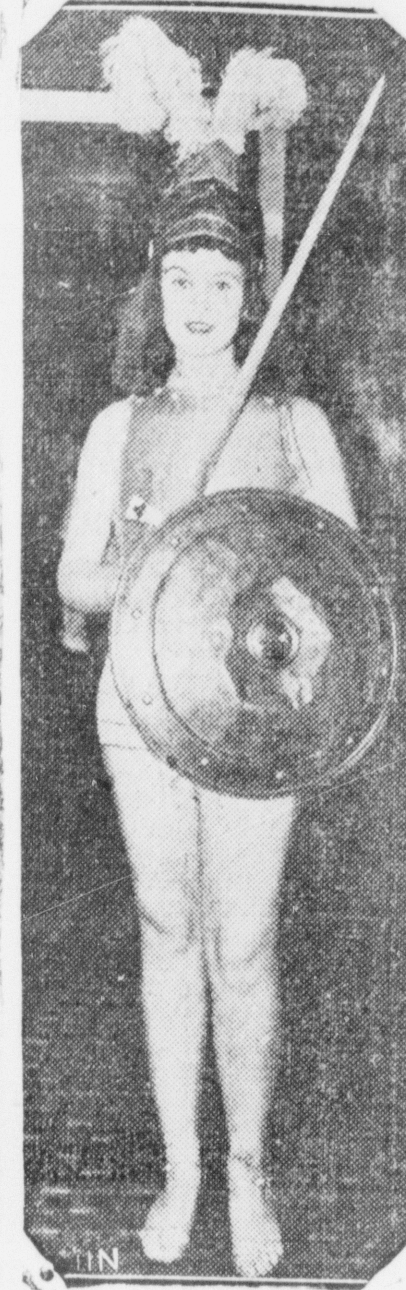

Laedlein came back home proudly displaying the medal he won as the best shot at Camp Meade, Md.

That Phenomenal Parker

By BURNLEY

ONE definite threat to Fred Perry and the American Davis Cuppers in the forthcoming tennis championships is young Frankie Parker, eighteen-year-old protégé of the renowned Mercer Beasley, and one of the most promising young racket-wielders in the game today.

The way Parker has been playing of late, he will be bad medicine for anybody, even including the brilliant Perry, world's No. 1 net ace. Frankie's game has improved tremendously, and when he annihilated that mighty mite, "Betsy" Grant, in straight sets recently, he appeared to be better than ever before in his brief but brilliant court career. Parker has been carefully coached by Mercer Beasley, and the man who brought out Vines, Sutter, Grant and Carolin Babecek predicts great things for the young Polish-American racketeer.

Experienced tennis men of the old school like Tilden and Vinyo Richards think a lot of this kid, mainly because he has a fine, well-rounded game, and has a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of tennis strategy. In this, Parker differs from many other present-day American tennis stars, most of whom seem to rely on mere speed and forcing tactics, and lack the necessary variety of strokes to cope with polished British stylists like Austin and Perry.

Parker's main weakness heretofore has been his forehead, which lacked authority and severity, but of late Beasley's protégé has added considerable speed and force to his stroking.

The bespectacled Beasley points out that his most famous pupil, Vines, jumped from No. 8 to the No. 1 ranking in 1932, and intimates that Parker, who occupies the No. 7 spot at present, may also make a bid for top ranking in the coming nationals.
